

[PDF] War Poetry Collection (BBC Radio Presents)

War Poetry Collection (BBC Radio Presents)

Bbc

Download PDF / ePub / DOC / audiobook / ebooks*

Download

Read Online

#10180080 in Books Random House Audio 1999-03-02 1999-03-02 Formats: Abridged, Audiobook Original language: English PDF # 2 .85 x 4.39 x 7.021, Running time: 145 minutes Binding: Audio Cassette | File size: 53.Mb

Bbc : War Poetry Collection (BBC Radio Presents) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised War Poetry Collection (BBC Radio Presents):

Throughout the ages, poetry has always been a means of expressing the condition of war. Dating back to the 16th Century, the poems in this specially compiled anthology tell of many common themes: the heat of battle, the home front, the rigors of training, the loss of a loved one and the impact on the lives of those left behind. With over eighty poems read by acclaimed British actors Stephen Moore, Tim Pigott-Smith, Juliet Stevenson and Sam West, this collection contains such well-known verse as Wilfred Owen's Anthem for Doomed Youth and Henry Reed's Lessons of the War, as well as lesser-known but equally enthralling poems including the early works of two young servicemen- Spike Milligan and Dirk Bogarde. From ancient battles, to two World Wars and even to the recent conflict in Bosnia, these poems are sometimes humorous, sometimes moving, and always powerful. Produced by the world's experts in fine radio entertainment, this magnificent anthology will astound lovers of poetry and introduce a new world of poetry to first-time listeners.

From School Library Journal Grade 7 Up- Dating back to the 16th century, these poems tell of many common themes: the heat of battle, the home front, the rigors of training, the loss of a loved one. Copyright 1999 Reed Business Information, Inc. From the Inside Flap Throughout the ages, poetry has always been a means of expressing the condition of war. Dating back to the 16th Century, the poems in this specially compiled anthology tell of many common themes: the heat of battle, the home front, the rigors of training, the loss of a loved one and the impact on the lives of those left behind. With over eighty poems read by acclaimed British actors Stephen Moore, Tim Pigott-Smith, Juliet Stevenson and Sam West, this collection contains such well-known verse as Wilfred Owen's Anthem for Doomed Youth and Henry Reed's Lessons of the War, as well as lesser-known but equally enthralling poems including the early works of two young servicemen- Spike Milligan and Dirk Bogarde. From ancient battles, to two World Wars and even to the recent conflict in Bosnia, these poems are sometimes humorous, sometimes moving, and always powerful. Produced by the world's experts in fine radio entertainment, this magnificent anthology will astound lovers of poetry and introduce a new world of poetry to first-time listeners.