Truncale When a book, no matter what the subject matter is, can be both funny and informative at the same time, it is bound to be a winner. I have a lifetime of interest and passion for reading, reviewing and writing. This fantastic 264 page book, "What did we use before toilet paper" by Andrew Thompson made me smile, laugh, and be amazed at the same time. I love books that provide answers to unusual and unique questions. This volume has so many great questions and answers that this review cannot do it justice. The following is just a very small sample of some of the question and answers this book contains: Can the wall of China be seen from space? Why were neckties invented? Why do we yawn and why is it contagious? What is a blue moon? Do you get wetter when walking in the rain than you do when running? Why do women talk more than men do, but can't read maps as well as men? When was toilet paper invented and what was used before then? How similar are humans to apes? How do people count cards in casinos? Did Robin Hood actually exist? Do hair and fingernails continue to grow after people have died? Can babies hear voices while inside the womb? Was Nostradamus able to predict the future? Why is New York city called "the big apple"? Why does catnip affect cats? How do mirrors work? How can you tell if someone is lying? You will be surprised at many of the answers for many of the numerous questions in this volume. This book was such a good read I could not put it down until I finished reading it. This book will increase the sum total of your knowledge on many topics. Rating: 5 Stars. Joseph J.
